

Cresta Archuletta Named NAHN Executive Director

At its most recent meeting, NAHN's Board of Directors voted to appoint Cresta Archuletta as executive director. She succeeds Jim Booth, who served as interim executive director for the past year.

Cresta, who grew up in Colorado, lived in Los Angeles and Washington, DC before moving to North Carolina where she and her husband live in the beautiful Foothills region of the state.

Prior to joining NAHN as deputy executive director last spring, Cresta served as Director of Strategic Partnerships at Hispanic Communications Network. Cresta believes NAHN's impact on diversity in health care will continue to be significant.

"By working to recruit more Hispanics to the profession NAHN will not only transform nursing education, but also change the face of nursing leadership," she says. "NAHN's work in Hispanic communities, which in many cases includes underserved populations, will improve access to care, health awareness, and in turn build healthier communities."
